Professional Experience

Katherine has more than 30 years of business and information technology experience, including managing software development, analyzing business processes, and applying technology to solve complex business challenges.

Katherine recently retired from Ankura Consulting, which she joined with the 2018 acquisition of c3/consulting, where she was one of the original partners and the head of operations, finance, human resources, and technology. Prior to c3, Katherine was the chief information officer of TCS Management Group (now Aspect Communications), a developer of industry-leading workforce management software.

Katherine is skilled in helping companies define their business processes and technical requirements, selecting software solutions to meet those needs, and evaluating their IT resources for maximum effectiveness and efficiency. Her expertise is in coordinating and communicating across business and technology groups, translating the needs of end users into technical directives and distilling complex information into insights for non-technical executives and staff.
